Wheatgrass

Supercharge yourself naturally.

Wheatgrass is a naturally growing plant which is well endowed with the nutrients we need. It is packed with numerous vitamins and minerals. As well as being rich with nutrients, wheatgrass provides the complete menu of enzymes which enable a multitude of biological and chemical functions within our bodies. Wheatgrass is also an excellent source of chlorophyll. Chlorophyll and haemoglobin are almost identical at the molecular level, the sole difference being that the central element in haemoglobin is iron, whereas for chlorophyll it is magnesium.

It has been shown that ingesting chlorophyll dramatically improves the speed at which red blood cells are created. The chlorophyll in wheatgrass can normalise high blood pressure as it dilates the pathways throughout the body.

The nutritional properties of wheatgrass are well known, and have been for thousand's of years. It is an incredibly concentrated source of all the minerals, food enzymes and vitamins we need, such as A, C, E and K and also B1, B2, B3, B5, B6, B8 and B12. This amazing drink also contains Iron, Calcium, Iodine, Selenium, Zinc and loads more essential minerals. If this wasn't enough it also contains hundreds of enzymes useful to the body which are often not found in any other foods.

All nutrients in Wheatgrass juice are rapidly digested, ensuring instant absorption feeding and energising our bodies.

We are not suggesting wheatgrass corrects poor diets, but in a society where there are so many strains on our body from additives, poor water, pollution, chemicals and processed food, wheatgrass can naturally help tip the balance back in the human's favour.

SPONSORED WALK, BEWL RESEVOIR ON BEHALF OF SARAH CLOSE SMITH FOR NEW APPROACHES on September 8th 2006

A group of at least seventy people and many dogs met at Bewl Reservoir . Lamberhurst ,Kent to walk the 10 mile charity walk. We all had a lovely walk on a cloudless day around the scenic Bewl Water. The atmosphere was happy and friendly. The walk took about two hours and finished at The Bull 3 legged Cross, Ticehurst. We all sat outside for a well earned lunch and everyone chatted, mainly outside. Sarah, who had breast cancer, was unable to walk with us but met family and close friends at her house and we walked down to the start with her where she greeted everyone personally. Dottie has been in regular contact with Sarah during this time and I know New Approaches is the charity she particularly wanted to support. Whilst the walk was vibrant and friendly I think we all felt the poignancy of the purpose of the charity walk and Sarah was very much in our thoughts and hearts that day and we will continue to love and support her family through this time.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BREATHING by Sue Hindle

The importance of the role of the breath is generally very little understood in the west. In Eastern cultures it is the basis of a whole science in itself.

Expressed in a nutshell it is this: The most important factor in coping with the stresses and strains of everyday life is high energy. If you have high energy you can cope with just about anything that comes along. If you have low energy it is much more difficult. There are various sources of energy. The roles of sleep, and good food are well recognised. The role of the Breath though, is not. To get a grasp of their relative importance however, ask yourself this. How long do you live without food? How long do you live without drink? How long do you live without sleep and finally, without breath?

The lungs are important organs; they supply all the other organs and the immune system with what they need to function correctly. They are also important organs for eliminating waste products. We tend to use only 30% of our lung capacity, and even then often breathe stale air. The body does not stand a chance. Think what the light of a torch is like with a half spent battery, and then think of what it is like with a new strong battery. In the same way, if you only give your body part of what it needs to function adequately then you will be like that pale orange light in the torch bulb.

When the body is functioning under par, the weakest link for that individual tends to malfunction and manifest in symptoms of some sort. It is a common finding that those who have practised the breathing techniques recover spontaneously from all sorts of conditions (though this of course differs from individual to individual)

In addition the breath is the link between the mind and the emotions. In the same way that the breath patterns will change according to the emotion albeit, sadness, fear, pleasure, panic etc, so emotions will respond to the breath. Thus working with the breath has can prove very effective in managing powerful or uncomfortable emotions.

Deep relaxation can also be achieved through the breath.

The courses promoted by the Art of Living Foundation give participants a practical introduction to breath work, which in combination with other processes and course content have proved very helpful to people in managing to live life much more pleasurably and healthily.

They spread over 6 flowing days, for a few hours each day (evenings on weekdays) and cost £200 (£150) concessions.

The teacher teaches on a voluntary basis. AOL is a 'not for' profit organisation.

Swan
(dialogue with a tumour)

*A towering Swan
Swam into my life
Indigo like sky before dawn*

*It spoke of the rage
Suppressed thro' my life
Dark red like a heart being torn*

*It showed me the fear
Of dying to life
Coal black like a line that's been drawn*

*I rode on that swan
To the end of my life
Clear blue with nothing to mourn*

*Swan showed me the hope
Of a new kind of life
Rose pink like a babe that's been born*

*Swan flew away
And I swam from my life
White gold like the first break of morn*
